Too much Prohibitionism has jeopardized Republican success in Indiana.

MAINE went Republican by a decreased majority last week, which further increased the hopes of the Bryan managers.

NIGHT-RIDING in Mississippi has produced a crop of intimidated cotton planters from hauling their cotton to the gin.

Gov. HUGHES was nominated by the Republicans for Governor of New York last week. Hughes has quipped himself with lots of independent voters because of his puritanical tendencies.

BRYAN last week made his first appearance in a campaign of what he called the "country in 1896," making many speeches in New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island, and that his reception is far more hospitable than ever before and the Republican leaders are sitting up and taking notice.

SINGER, the millionaire iron-maginate of Pittsburgh, celebrated his golden wedding recently and no one but his wife and four sons was present. Each child found a present of four million dollars on the table. As the classic phrase has it, that is going down.

Singer retained some fifteen millions to guard the wolf from his own door.

Wm. R. HEARST in two different speeches last week quoted a lot of letters from John D. Archbold to Senator Joseph B. Foraker from which it appeared that the Standard Oil magnate had been supplying the Senator with large sums to prevent hostile legislation by Congress. In consequence Foraker has withdrawn from the campaign in order not to embarrass Taft.

The danger of an accident to the flying machine was well illustrated Thursday when Orville Wright took Lieut. Selfridge up in his aeroplane for a trip. The propeller blade broke, the machine turned over and fell to the ground, fracturing Selfridge's skull and breaking Wright's thigh and several ribs. Selfridge died, Wright up to that time held the world's record for sustained flight in an aeroplane.

BRYAN and Hearst combined have put the managers of the Republican Presidential campaign seriously on the defensive. Jas. A. Hill's report of a candidate in the West has alarmed Wall Street almost to the panic stage. Undoubtedly the Republican party is in grave danger of its Waterloo. It has been superciliously commended heretofore, and that fact is an assurance to the bulk of the party unwarranted by present conditions.

UNCLE JOE CANNON is having the light of his life re-election in the Danville, Ill., district. His opponents are attacking him from all over the country. They say that Uncle Joe personally is as sweet as a peach, but that he is an old-be-devil of iniquity in blocking the progress of needed Congressional reform. A defeat this time will do for Uncle Joe forever more.

The Ohio river has ceased to flow at Marietta, Ohio. A steamboat with a tow of coal barges is resting on the gravel bed of what was to river. At Cincinnati it is said that a coal barge was the river. The drought is severer than has been known throughout the Ohio valley, and it also extends east of the Alleghenies in Pennsylvania. There were severe frosts in the early days, but no doubt the destruction of the trees causes a more frequent recurrence of them.

The Democratic State convention of New York nominated Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler for Governor and John A. Dix for Lieutenant Governor. The platform contains the gem, which is worthy of the best traditions of the party:

We are opposed to all summary legislation and we believe the people are best governed who are least governed.

The policy of that paragraph will regenerate the Democratic party and give it a renewed and earnest lease of life. It is most earnestly embraced by the party throughout the nation.
